Halted Order Issues with Amazon PunchOut in LoboMart

Since the launch of the new Amazon PunchOut site, many users have contacted Purchasing regarding “Halted Orders.” Amazon may halt an order for one of several reasons, and it can be confusing. Following are a few of the possible reasons for an order to be halted:

- The most common reason for an order to be halted is a change in price. If the item price changes from the time you add it to your Amazon cart and your LoboMart order submission, the order is halted. This is to protect you from being charged more money for the item than you originally agreed to pay.
- You may have an order halted because the item sold out between the time you placed it in your cart and the time you actually submitted the order. Amazon is not able to “back-order” items. This happens most often when ordering used items, such as books. The seller may only have one or two available, and they can be gone before you are able to finish checking out.
- Orders have also been halted for problems with shipping addresses. In some instances, Amazon order delivery is being delayed or Requisitioners are receiving emails stating the Order has been halted. This is related to an issue with how Amazon is processing Ship-To addresses. Purchasing is working with Amazon to test a fix to this problem and expect shipping issues to be resolved shortly.

If you receive a notice of a halted order from Amazon and are unable to determine why it was not processed, please sign in using your UNM email address and Amazon password at <https://www.amazon.com/gp/help/customer/contact-us?initialIssue=punch-out>.

You will be able to request a phone call, send an email or chat with a support representative who can review your order. This link is available only for PunchOut users, so you will get individualized attention specific to our site.

As always, we welcome your feedback and/or questions at purch@unm.edu.

Chrome River Goes Live December 1, 2016

Chrome River is an intuitive, user friendly system for reimbursing individuals, paying non-procurement invoices to companies, and allocating/reconciling PCard transactions. It will be the only system used beginning December 1, 2016, to reimburse employees, students, and non-employees for expenses they incur on UNM's behalf. The Banner DPI/DPEZ process will sunset on November 30, 2016.

Final PCard Reconciliations with Bank of America statements (old fashioned way) will be for the statement dated December 5, 2016. All PCard transactions posting December 6, 2016, and beyond will be allocated and reconciled with the "one and done" methodology in Chrome River.

Additional information can be found on the Chrome River website at chromeriver.unm.edu.
